

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

No. Idaho Team 2010-02-14

Teacher: Elyon, Serena, Unknown, Light

T/R: Mark Rogers, Cathy Morris, Mary Rogers

Prayer: [Mark] Happy Valentine's Day. On this day, we're provided with the opportunity to examine and enjoy the relationship of love that we have for others. May we take this attitude of joy for the love that we have, for the love that we share into our every day lives. May we do this in tribute to you, those who bring us this love to be shared and enjoyed. Help us to make it so.

Elyon: [Mark] Greetings this morning my friends, I am Elyon here enjoying your company, simply making my presence known in the process. I'd like to, as usual, take a few of the pearls of wisdom that you bring to this forum and share so lovingly and string them together to make today's accumulation.

As you observe in your earthly life, there are a number of influences which serve to condition the mortal as they are growing and developing. You have parental influences and intentional guiding of the parents for the young ones to get them sent off in the right direction. As well you observe there are many many life forces at play which have an influence, some positive and others negative on the developing individual. So as you develop from the beginning you are being guided and you are reacting "to" all these various influences in your lives and in so doing this accumulation of reaction to this conditioning make you the individual that you are. They determine how you interact given your understanding, awareness, and exposure to all these relative factors.

At some point you declare yourself adult and finished growing so to speak and it is observed that from some point as this to very late in your life, many adult individuals continue to follow the same patterns and repeat the same actions as they have been so conditioned. I observe in your weekly meetings and discussions that you are embracing the opportunity to have willful intention about your conditioning. That is the greatest opportunity and option that a mortal of this realm may exercise and yet so many don't realize that such conditioning may be altered or changed by any willful pursuit. But you are learning that all things are possible with willful pursuit and that your intention is paramount in this process in determining who you are. You are not settling for being the result of conditioning from the past. You are engaging and pursuing conditioning for the future and literally rewriting some of your past influences in your lives.

This is one of the biggest gifts of grace to you as a mortal of the realm. This is how you literally change your standing as a mortal of the realm, merely by swinging this awareness into place and making choices and determinations based upon your awareness that you have this ability to choose anew and become afresh and deciding that you will be bold enough to choose that and do it. True enough this world shapes the individuals on it but it is not necessary nor required that you stop there. You may move forward, past, and beyond what your environment would bring you. You may decide to move into the spiritual dimension and thus alter the material complement.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

This whole pursuit is done in faith with your trust and I commend you all for following your heart so certainly and steadily as to be brought to this place of awareness. So, on this Valentine's Day where your local culture promotes the awareness and appreciation of your loved ones, I bring you my gratitude for I have awareness and appreciation for my loved ones and you are among them. Let's follow the inspiration offered and choose to bring this awareness and appreciation into each day and every day.

If you were to truly consider what is the most one single important thing to anyone or to everyone, and if they were to seriously and earnestly consider this question, it would all come down to love for love conditions all else. If you have love you have peace, grace, beauty, goodness, and truth. Yet, as you have mentioned, this loving is unable to be measured in earthly terms except by its fruits; its presence is known by how it alters the equation and changes the circumstance. Its absence is witnessed in the ungodly pursuits so clearly evident on this world; therefore let us appreciate every day as if it's Valentine's Day honoring this unseen force of love which then becomes so evident as it changes and colors our lives.

Thank you for bringing such pleasing concepts into the arena for discussion this morning. I would now like to open up this gracious opportunity for others. Thank you and farewell.

Serena: [Cathy] I am always looking for opportunities to uplift your experience on the planet, to take your experience to an expanded level of love and engagement. Your comments concerning the freedom of choice that accompany a vacation, a vacation involves intention to explore new possibilities. You make a conscious choice to change the habitual direction of your activities and this expansion of possibilities leads to activation of dormant talent, abilities, and energy. This is the power of reversion, to let go of habitual action and relax into a new frame of mind. Your mind is integral in creating your reaction to events you encounter. It is beneficial to take a time apart from your routine and a habitual reaction you have to it. Sometimes it is advantageous to take a step back and view your situation from a different position. At any moment during your day you have the capability to step aside and realign your perception and the responses you display to the situations involved. Always the power to choose is yours; always the response is changeable. I encourage you to take advantage of the ability to choose your direction.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Monjoronson: [Mark] Hello friends, I am Monjoronson stepping forward to avail myself of this gracious opportunity. Let's play a little more with this idea of going on vacation since it is the act of choosing something alternate to your regular activities and since it is typically a rewarding activity and since there are usually lasting benefits to a vacation, then I observe that what we do here now must be a vacation. We all make the choice to engage in an activity that is not frequently pursued, an activity that is typically alternate from our other activities. We all come to this place with some sense of openness and willingness to take in the experience, even a new experience. We all show up here ready to engage in the activity of the hour and we all eagerly contribute to the process, sharing back and forth and enjoying each others contribution and simple presence.

We all then come away from this experience every time with some feeling of having been rewarded for our efforts, some enrichment to our experience as a result of our effort. After having chosen and done this activity, we then are conditioned and changed by it in a manner of our own choosing. This is how we condition ourselves for future experience. You see you may be conditioned as a result of your past experiences or you may be the conditioner of your new and future experiences by bringing your intention into the process.

And so I suggest that we all engage in these vacations from our other routine activities with great joy and anticipation that we will get what we came to find and that it will be an enjoyable and pleasurable experience which then serves to condition our next experience and in fact everything in our individual experience is flavored by the conditioning we do day by day, even hour by hour. This is how a group changes, an individual changes, a nation changes, and a world changes, is this conditioning yourself anew, not simply being satisfied to repeat old patterns but to create patterns of choice, patterns of intention.

In keeping with the topic discussed of chemical or even cellular reaction, perhaps this whole topic provides much food for consideration when considering what you might wish for or pray for when utilizing your intention and creative process for another or even for yourself. It's one more perspective that can be employed to direct this intentional energy, one more arrow you may pull from your quiver and take great aim with and then release.

It is once again as it always has been, my great pleasure to be with you and be provided this opportunity to communicate with you in this unique process that we have developed where we have taken a vacation from the norm. I too have much affection for all of you in this process that we are in together and I bid you all a wonderful Valentine's Day and every day. May it be charged with the awareness of love. I take my leave now; thank you and farewell.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Mary: [unknown] Well I'm getting someone who is saying in my ear: Well hello my friends who happen to find themselves sojourning on planet earth, Urantia. Why not as you move into your day, skip along today instead of just walk? Why not dance through your life? Take a moment and as you are walking down the hallway, down that aisle out in your yard, wherever you are, why not skip, dance, frolic a little bit here and there? Lighten your movements and your attitudes. Thank you for hearing me.

Light: [Mark] Hello to all, I am Light and by the grace of love my request has been honored to bring you my heartfelt message of love for you all are some of my closest family and I cherish the relationship I have with you. On this day of observing your loved one, I was overcome with the desire to make my feelings known, make my intention into words so that I may bring greater expression to them. Thank you all for the part that you play in my experience and I desire you to know that I have such great affection and love which I direct to you. Please drink this in and know that it is from me.

Unknown: [Mary] I'm getting come to the light, come to the bright. My children drink in the joy that is available. Bring your sunny dispositions even into the grey day. Bring the sunshine through your choice. Turn to the light, turn to the bright. Thank you.

No. Idaho Team 2010-02-21

Teachers: Elyon, Michael, Monjoranson

T/R: Mark Rogers, Cathy Morris

Prayer: Divine Parents, what a joy it is to come together with this group and with you once again. What a treat it is to experience your presence and the presence of the others who gather at this time in pursuit of your presence. It is a joy to witness the connection we have grown with each other on our side of the veil and as well it is a joy to participate and witness and the connection that our group builds and establishes with those on your side of the veil. We seek your assistance as always in strengthening this bond between us so that we have less and less a distance to cross as we reach for you and as we are sure you reach for us. I bear witness that this distance between us has diminished. I'm sure I speak for all of us. We have witnessed that this space between us has diminished significantly as we have made our efforts to find you and as you have been there steadfastly to receive us. Thank you so much for this process that allows this to be so and allows us to be a part of it. We love you and we are certain that you love us. Thank you.

Elyon: [Mark] Hello friends, once again it is a pleasure to be with you. I am Elyon here to pick up on some of the threads that have been brought to this forum today and we will continue our discussion on the value of coming into the spiritual space that we have referred to from our beginnings together as the stillness. I call you all to witness that I have been a regular supporter of this topic and will take any opportunity to bring this issue into whatever discussion we might be having as it is such a central and key factor in the ability to make any proper discernment of all else that we may chance to discuss for it is bringing you to a point of cosmic reset.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

As you know with your computers for instance, every once in a while they follow an erroneous path and become corrupted in their function and you all witness that such a machine, having erred and taken such a wrong path, will soon find an erroneous dead end and become completely stumped in its ability to proceed. At that point the only option left open to you is to go back to a point that you know and are familiar with, a common starting point, which is referred to as resetting from the start.

Then your machine may act far more predictably because it has been launched properly from the right starting point and will function in accordance with its programming. You all are very similar in this regard in that you are programmed machines and you function very predictably as per your programming. Every once and a while it is observed that you too proceed down an erroneous pathway which leads you astray from proper functioning and may lead you into areas of distress or depression or fear or doubt.

The only correction that is certain for such a condition is to bring yourself back to a point of reset and this point I have continually referred to as engaging in the practice of stillness. But in your contribution offered today referring to meditation, the same principles are applied. This desire for you to start your program interpretation from a point of reset or a point of "all is well," enables your programs to be launched with a proper perspective and to be directed with the proper pathways of hope and idealism and trust and faith. When your programs operate with these dependable pathways, the results then are predictable as well.

Great fruits of the spirit may be observed when these programs follow such pathways and likewise, great disharmony may be observed when your programs are conditioned down the pathways of fear, doubt, anger, hatred, or mistrust. So in a very real way, just as you continually may upgrade your operating system on your computer machine, you may upgrade as well your internal operating system and choose to run your program more effectively and efficiently with the use of higher and higher programming.

You are not destined to run the same loop in the same way over and over again unless such is your choice, even your choice by default I may point out. But, as the operator you choose which operating system you will execute and which desired program you will run and even how you will condition this program to be implemented and directed. If you consider your mind and its massive data storage capacity as your onboard computer, then you might consider your eternal soul as the operator and you might consider stillness as hooking up to the main frame and downloading the latest upgraded operating system that is most appropriate for your tasks which you are desiring be executed by the use of this powerful onboard system.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

But it is good to keep in mind the awareness of the distinction between the operator and the system being used, for the system is at the command of the operator, not the other way around. You have the capacity to customize your operating system as you so desire throughout your process of ascension. And so it is that no two operating systems will be the same. No two individuals will have the same structure and program for navigating similar circumstance or input, rather the results will be different to each in accordance with their own individualized operating system.

I would make mention of one more item worthy of bringing into the equation in your process of stillness or meditation. When looking to upgrade your system, the direction to turn is as you have stated, towards the direction of the Christ mind or the Christ presence which may be used to remodel your current assembly of internal configuration, to allow you to interpret differently what may be some of the same old stimulants that you encounter whether they may be stimulants of the current or stimulants resident in the past, they, when confronted will turn on the old program that was used to interpret them much as when somebody sends you a document, your computer will automatically access a program to interpret the document. Likewise when you encounter a circumstance, there is this automatic association with a former program which was used to interpret it and will be used again until and unless that program becomes altered and changed in some way. Again this is accomplished in this going back to reset and beginning anew from a new starting point which allows even old programs to be readjusted and realigned to accommodate the new operating system which now as a result of your own choosing will be the dominant operating system.

Thank you for the opportunity to once again attempt the use of metaphor to cement the greater understanding into your awareness of the different aspects of your being and the influence they have over one another. It has been my pleasure to address you with this topic today. I now allow space for others, farewell.

Michael: [Cathy] Forgiveness is a way of living in the present and releasing the attachment to mental constructs. The ability to release this attachment to past experience is most important in the movement toward your intention. Always is help available to you in this process. All that is needed is the request for assistance. Always am I available to you. Ask and the door will be opened. Together we can open the closed portion of your experience, the usually painful past experiences that are weighting down your spirit. In this process your limitations will release and your potentials will rise to the forefront. In this process you will be able to access the deeper levels of spiritual connection. I am always, as your Father, available for support and consultation. Together we can process and release the limiting influences on your spirit.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Monjoronson: [Mark] Greetings to all, I am Monjoronson welcoming this opportunity you provide to access this forum in great gratitude. I would take this line of thinking and attempt to further this thought stream with another analogy today. If, as Elyon has said, there are the distinct different components of the operator and the operating system to be used, then I invite you to entertain the idea that as the operator you may also avail yourself of the opportunity to step back one step and become the observer of all that is transpiring.

If you could, as a matter of exercise, accept the idea that you may see yourself as the operator engaged with the operating system and begin to observe through this process what transpires as a result of the operator and the operating system working together. In other words, everything that happens in your life is the result of this combination, the user and the system that is being used and as the observer you may step back and be able to more accurately discern whether this whole course of action serves you to the degree that you might desire.

Does your initial operating of the system start out properly? Is the operator balanced and focused, and then does the system in place uphold the operators desires and standards or does it take the operator in a habitual direction which is not of the operators choosing? You see many many things occur which are simple habitual patterns which are written into the program and which the operator may turn over to the reliable operating system. But as you grow and change as an operator, your operating system will stand in need of revision so that it's chosen tasks are executed in a manner which upholds your standards and adheres to your ideals.

Otherwise, the operators intention may not be served by the older operating system and that is when you may discern as the observer, that the system in place may be in need of revision or upgrade in order to accommodate the new ideals, the new intentions, the greater vision. Sometimes it is only by taking a step or two back and looking at how a circumstance or situation played out in your life that you can see how it was executed and by what program and how serviceable all this was to the original intention.

If you discover that the results were less than you had dreamed of, hoped for, and desired, then it may be fairly clear to you that your operating system has fallen short of your expectation and you may need to do some reprogramming in order to more adequately execute your intention. This is a rather constant process or at least should be a rather constant process for those who are actively engaged in spiritual growth and ascension for no operating system will be adequate to bring you desired results as your desired results will be in a constant state of upgrade and change; so must your operating system change to provide you with such results.

And so, as you have mentioned, it is possible to rewrite some of these long standing approaches and programs that you activate and which most predictably provide you with similar results. You have a saying about the use of your computers that if there is garbage in, you can only get garbage out. If good and proper programs are intentionally installed and used, then the results are more desirable and effective. Imagine what the possibilities would be if you were to, with such great intention and awareness, continually upgrade and rewrite your operating system with the intention and desire to create greater and greater results. Then that is exactly what you would have, that is exactly what you will have because this process will continue throughout your ascension career.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

At one point in your lives you may have been quite content to simply have a calculator as that is all you may have needed at that point. Then you may have found it useful to upgrade to a computer to simply do the most basic of tasks, but even that, you find you shortly outgrow its capacity and need a bigger and better operating system as your capabilities increase to be able to utilize a bigger and better system. And so it is throughout this process, a series of outgrowing the old ways, patterns, conditions, and approaches, and rewriting those patterns into new approaches and different programs that can be employed to gain greater and greater results.

I feel we have utilized these analogies of computers and operators to the very limits of our memory capacity today. So I would not overload the system today but rather would encourage you to feel free to step back and act as observer. Is the whole system functioning as you would have it function? Are the results the ones you would choose or do they fall a little short of your desires and expectations? If so, let the operator redesign the system so that it will be at the command of the operator to do the bidding of the one who is really in charge.

Thank you for hearing my words today. Go in peace and have a fruitful week as you mull over all this that we have discussed today, farewell.

ABRAHAM & MARY MARCH 8, 2010 WOODS CROSS GROUP

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am touched to see your faithful souls this evening. I have known you for many years and I believe we will know each other for many more. A project has been started on the planet and I understand that many of you will continue to be a part of the progress long after the flesh is done.

I know that most of our lessons are spiritually based and we are always trying to learn to live a spiritual life as a mortal. Over the past weeks I am beginning to understand how competitive this mortal life is and you have to be more wise in this day than was in my own day, which was mostly about power and fear.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

I know that the financial world of today has many barely hanging by their fingertips and the stress is literally killing them. If this life was a game we would choose to use foresight and look ahead to make preparations that would keep us from the life-threatening stress.

I am MARY. Greetings, friends. To me the world has always seemed competitive, whether a mother was at the market bargaining for food for her family or the merchant who bargained for more money for his family. Healthy competition is normal. When you get to that place of physical and mental sickness, then it is time to scale back.

Those things you hang onto for dear life, you have to question why. Look at the technology of today. How did we ever get by without them? In the natural occurrences of health, medical technology was not able to keep an individual alive for so long. Perhaps they were not supposed to. It would seem that individuals of that day had a bit more faith and trust in Father's will and cared not to beat the system.

We each know individuals who strive on this competitiveness and that is acceptable. There are also individuals who require peace and have not care to compete. For them it is just better to let go of that grasp, then fall into the Father's will and see where it takes you.

The lesson this evening is manyfold, where you are in a world where you must have your wits about you to survive, courage to play the silly mortal games. On the other hand, we cannot let the stress of everyday competition take us down physically or mentally. There are many aspects of the world to discover and still so much you haven't seen. If you are continually worried, you are going to miss a great deal.

That is all for this evening. I thank each one of you for listening and your participation. Every day you mean more to Abraham and me. Call on us if you have need. Until next time, shalom.

Monjoronson - Guardians of Destiny - Stillness - Healing - Abortion - Mar 11, 2010 - Audio Session #91

Teacher: Monjoronson

Subjects Discussed This Session:

Guardians of Destiny
Being Able to Receive a Teacher
Rebellion

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Seeking Answers in Stillness
Healing & The Magisterial Mission
Bestowal of Personality
Affirmation of When Personality Is Bestowed
Consequence of Miscarriages
Entering The Journey of Consciousness

TR: Daniel Raphael

Moderator: Philip

March 11, 2010

Prayer: We invoke the presence of the Holy Father. We know that the Spirit of Truth is here to guide the revelations that comes through and we ask the Holy Spirit to guide us in these words; Spirit of Truth, the Holy Spirit and so we give thanks. Amen.

Guardians of Destiny

Question #1: In many transcripts, I read that the guardian angels primary duties are to safeguard and protect their human subjects. Since they cannot interfere with the accidents of time or natural course of human evolution, what is it that they are protecting or safeguarding us from?

Monjoronson: Thank you for your good question. The role of guardian angels and the role of guardians of destiny are distinct. They are very similar but they are distinct. Let us involve ourselves today with the guardian angel aspects. Guardian angels protect humans from those travesties of a human course and development which would bring their lives shorter. Guardian angels do become much more involved in an individuals life as that individual commits themselves more and more to their course of development that is being unfolded by their Thought Adjuster. This is truly measurable and observable by the Thought Adjuster and guardian. This is weighed by the increase of the volume or "weight" of the individual soul.

The guardian's main interest is to assist the individual to become involved and guided towards those developments which fulfill that life plan. So it is not so much from, but to; it's much like the rights written into your constitution or your nation. There are rights to and there are rights from, so it is important to know that distinction. Guardian angels offer themselves and their lives to assist the individual to become more than they are. As the mortal moves ahead in their life they have less and less to be guarded from.

Further, the development of your world has become such that guardian angels are allowed to become more active in the lives of their guarded children of destiny; they are allowed to become much more involved and intimate with that individual. Exceptions that are further ahead require the participation of the guardians supervising angel to assist in and to weigh whether to become more involved in that individual's life more dramatically. There is a hierarchy of authority and privileges to express that authority as the line of angelic guardianship ascends towards the Third Person in Paradise. Thank you.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Being Able to Receive a Teacher

Question #2: Many teachers including yourself, Michael, and Nebadonia are telling us that we only need to ask in faith in order to receive a teacher. Many of us seem to believe that there is some kind of a ritual to be performed or they have to discover hidden meaning behind your words in order to really receive one. Would you please speak to this issue of requirements needed to receive a teacher?

Monjoronson: Certainly. The only requirement that is necessary for you to receive a celestial teacher is first sincerity; that means being authentic and genuine in your request and second the intent and the intention of your request. If you are sincere and your intention is to receive a celestial teacher to assist in your spiritual growth then one is automatically granted. You have only to address Christ Michael, your Thought Adjuster, guardian, or the Holy Spirit from Nebadonia that surrounds your world and fills it, to have your request fulfilled. Thank you.

Rebellion on Urantia

Question #3: I am still confused about role in the rebellion. According to the Urantia Book, Urantia was placed in isolation because former prince Caligastia joined the rebellion. I keep wondering, what does his defection have to do with us evolving humans on the planet?

Monjoronson: Caligastia and his staff and all the spiritual entities upon this world were the caretakers and guardians of this planet. In this case of mortals such as yourself, you have been a victim. All humanity that lived within the quarantine was victimized by their rebellion. You have not been punished by this but you were the victim of isolation through quarantine to control and to quell and to isolate the rebellion. Thank you.

Seeking Answers in Stillness

Question #4: Since the bestowal of the Spirit of Truth, man is subject to the teaching and guidance of a threefold spirit [the Father, Son and Spirit] endowment. Do we contact these teachers in stillness in some particular order to receive our answers?

Monjoronson: No, you do not need to specify to whom you direct these requests or these prayers or these thoughts that you have. Simply speak to Christ Michael or to your Thought Adjuster and this is sufficient. Your prayers, your requests are sorted according to who it is appropriate to answer them. Those messages of worship and devotion go to the Father. You can be assured that your sincere authentic requests are always answered though you may have passed from this realm before they are answered. Questions are earnestly and sincerely received and answered in the same way. If this is insufficient to answer your questions please state them to us.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Healing and the Magisterial Mission

Question #5: With the presence of a Paradise Son on earth in this mission, are mortals able to access the direct spiritual person of the Magisterial Son for healing? Would you, if you wish, please give us some idea if there is greater access to healing in general because of the spiritual power brought to Urantia in this era?

Monjoronson: The healing power that you speak of has increased on your world simply because the light or the vibration of your world has increased. There is additionally the aspect that the quarantine has been ended, that the circuits have been re-connected and that your sincere and earnest requests for healing are therefore much more effective. You do not need to make the request directly to me, Monjoronson, for healing as my mission is principally involved in healing the social and spiritual aspects of your world. Your healing comes through your own evolvment and spiritual development within yourself and your knowing that you have true access to full and complete healing through the energy stream that comes to you and is always available to you. You have the capacity to bring healing to yourself and to others when you are more and more in the light of God's presence when you more and more are in tune with your Thought Adjuster.

Many of you are confused about healing. Healing comes in many forms. There is the healing of one's mind wherein mental confusion is removed and eliminated by clarity of thought and rational existence. There is the healing of your physical body and it has many dimensions to its operation. There is as well the healing of your society, your social existence for yourself and for others. There is the healing of your planet so that it comes into the era of Light and Life more quickly than it would through happenstance or through the gradual process of social evolution. Your conscious attention to the healing of yourself, your societies, and to your world is important. It is uplifted and fulfilled through the participation of every individual on your world or held back by their lack of attention to do so. As you become more mature in your own personal spiritual being, so too can you become more effective in the healing of this world. We suggest that you consciously and diligently maintain yourself in the light of God that you become a bright and shiny beacon of the Christ light that shines through you when you allow it, when you invite it, when you encourage it and empower it. Thank you.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Question #6: [Philip] I have a question in regards mental healing. There is a rash of mental aberrations that seems to be gripping our society. How is a person with mental powers that are compromised able to heal themselves?

Monjoronson: You can heal yourself mentally through the conscious infusion of the Christ mind within yourself. You can heal yourself as well, and this may seem quite astounding, by simply refusing to be mentally ill. You know that there is a right and perfect pattern for the mind function and this was designed and given by God and the Life Carriers. You have a mind that can be healed. Organic problems on the other can be most difficult. I am speaking today most directly about functional mental illness which is an aberration of mind function and it too can come under the power of your will to heal yourself. The healing aspect is complete when you know that you are a child/son of God in the process of being perfected.

Your doubts about God's perfection in your life keeps many of you from expressing this and from healing yourselves. It is a most difficult process for you to fully understand on this primitive world. You [meaning collectively] on this world have been in darkness for so long, held in ignorance through the quarantine and you suffer this lack of an elevated awareness and empowerment of your mind. Minds of your caliber which do not bear this burden are much more capable of right thinking and healing when those difficulties do arrive. You have the facility of part or all of your mind being healed which you can apply through your will to the right and perfect outworking of your mental order and that of others. Use that part of your mind which is healed to do so. As it grows you can become more empowered. Thank you.

Question #7: So are you saying that in the main, the person has to heal themselves notwithstanding we do have doctors who are part of that healing process, but for people who are so compromised that they can't even focus on anything spiritual because of the nature of their illness, what is the possibility for another to take over in their stead, to act as their healer?

Monjoronson: Yes, there are times when the individual is so distraught in their thinking that they are unaware of their own capacity. It is essential then for others to pray for their right and perfect healing, for clarity of their mind and right functioning of their mind mechanism. The power of others to assist in this is very vital and important for the healing of those who are unable to heal themselves. Thank you.

Bestowal of Personality

Preamble: On Feb. 28 of this year in Special Session #4 you said the following about the bestowal of personality.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Monjoronson: "Life begins at conception, this is when personality is bestowed, this is when the eminence and presence of the individual becomes present."

I guess you may realize that many of us had concluded that the bestowal of personality on we humans was upon taking the first breath at birth. Since your teaching will change our perception dramatically, will you please confirm that you really did mean to say personality is bestowed upon conception. They go on to state:

If you are confirming that this information is accurate, the disclosure has a huge impact on the subject of abortion. We are not attempting to embroil you in the political storms around the subject of abortion, but this statement if true, probably has the force of a serious moral dilemma by placing the woman's free-will choice to abort up against destroying an eternal bestowal of personality. If the fetus were non-personal, the practice, while despicable does not rise to the level of a capitol crime.

Question #8: Could you help us navigate the dangerous moral shoals that abortion may represent in light of your disclosure? Thank you.

Affirmation of When Personality Is Bestowed

Monjoronson: Thank you for your well thought out question and statements. Yes, I do affirm that prior statement that at the moment of conception, life begins and that life is invested with personality and the beginnings of mind and personal spirit. This is the beginning of life and life is a continuum from that moment until death. The spark of life is not just a metaphor, it is an actual investment of life as a "thing" that is given to that individual at conception by spirit. Yes, life begins at that point and yes, life is valued and important. Life begins and is invested far, far earlier than at the moment of birth and the first breath that is taken after birth.

Life is given early on, personality is invested early on. How your society deals with this embryo, this life, is a concern for your societies and the individuals who bear those new souls. This is why it is so important to us and has been stated repeatedly with great energy by the teachers over the years, that conscious conception is important, that the intentions of child rearing be taken seriously from the first times when an individual is capable of begetting life, both males and females.

Abortions are extreme measures that are sometimes necessary. It is the mother who weighs this value. There are no mistakes in conception or in getting pregnant, it is simply the thoughtless disregard of making a conscious intention to avoid getting pregnant. Whether your society deals with this as a capitol crime is a concern of your society and not ours. The mores, laws, and standards for behavior on your world are socially devised and developed. Were you to ask us for a set of rules or "laws" to adhere to we would point you to the law of a sustainable population for your world or any world.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

It is important that life be given value. It is tremendously valuable, it is incredibly unique. It should be brought into existence through sincere dedication, commitment, and intention and that life be given the same value from the point of conception, after birth, through their adolescence, early adulthood, and all through their life; meaning that this person is truly wanted by this society, desired to come into existence and has a full and functional role in that society. And further, that this individual's potential at all levels of their existence be developed through opportunities to develop them to their greatest extent. In doing so, they would be of service and a reward in their lives to their societies, to themselves, to their spiritual growth they are working on, their life plan, and to their Thought Adjuster and guardian.

Life is not a triviality of existence. Life and begetting life is an important function of each of you. Even those of you who cannot beget children and raise them, it is important that you learn how to and that you take the opportunities to be with children, to be with those who are growing. We have much to say about this as you realize. Your world is in disarray. It is not unmanageable but the population that we have spoken about that will become decimated will have that end come about simply because there are too many people on your world, that this population number is unsustainable. There is a great circle of logic, reason and evolution on a world and it begins with conception. Thank you.

Consequence of Miscarriages

Philip: My mother had a miscarriage so that means somewhere on the morontia worlds I have a brother. I'm curious, will we follow the same course or is the fact that he was denied an earth life, a physical form, means he takes a different path to Paradise?

Monjoronson: Yes, I would be glad to speak to that. You can analyze this by yourself by asking this question. Were this individual to have had a full life, what has he missed by this miscarriage, by the absence of life? It simply means that he has missed out on the opportunity to make soul developing, soul filling decisions about his life and fulfill them through his actions. He will be given these opportunities on worlds for to be raised as infants and grow into adulthood. They will have many opportunities to make similar decisions, though of course you realize that most of the detrimental aspects of social existence on your world will be absent and he will be raised by those caretakers in the nurseries who love him and desire him to attend his fullest potential.

What remains are the temperament, personality, and development of his mind as a moral entity to make decisions of getting along with others and develop his own potential. He will be given every advantage to make those decisions correctly but always and forever, his decisions are his own and no one will amend, abrogate, or deny him the opportunity to make wrong decisions and wrong outcomes. This is part of the learning process of choosing to attend to the responsibilities of the infinite ascendent career which ends upon arrival in Paradise and the embrace with the Creator.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

You, my dear man, will have a much similar course as well but you will not be placed in the nurseries of course. You will be placed according to the development of your own soul potential in these schools on mansonia when you arrive there. Shortly after your integration, after you have been received, you will be given a time to be in the company of others, to become acquainted, to realize where you are, to grow in awareness and to be able to move consciously on your own in that new society. Then you will be assigned to the class wherein you will begin. Thank you.

Philip: Thank you for your answers. That concludes our regularly scheduled part of our Q/A session. If you would care to make any additional comments on any topic please do.

Entering The Journey of Consciousness

Monjoronson: Thank you. You are beginning to be more and more fully aware that this life that you have on this world is a journey of consciousness. You truly decide to embark on this ascendant journey just as surely as you embark on a travel to another city. You have an intention, you buy a ticket, you enter into the train or plane or car and you travel. Your decisions about your future life and the afterlife, mansion worlds, and in the spirit realms afterwards is as consciously and conscientiously engaged as your own travels here in this world. When you become this conscious of your life, then you can really make a difference in how fast you progress.

Many of you do not engage all the potentials that lie within you, consciously. You have only to pray for the expansion of your faculties and those facilities of life, living, and awareness that are available to you to grow even further. Do not be afraid to ask for the greatest development of your capabilities and the unfoldment of your potential with the proviso that you do so at the safest levels of growth that earns you the greatest reward for growth. You are conscious beings and doing so you become more responsible for the budding, growing soul within you, that morontial self which will reveal itself in you afterlife. Thank you for this opportunity to be with you today, good day.

Philip: Thank you Monjoronson for your counsel and also thank our t/r. That concludes our session. Thank you.

END

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Special Session #6 – Gender - March 12, 2010

Teacher: Monjoronson

Topics: Celestial perceptions of mortals
The topic of gender
Gender as a predisposition or temperament
Male orientation of Descending Sons of God
Does gender orientation continue during ascendant career?
Mortal gender handicaps
The myths of gender influence
Raising children to be equal, to be whole
Gender stereotyping causes separation
Sexual inequality in nature
Understanding the roles of environment and hormones on behavior
Words of comfort for those in Chile

TR: Daniel Raphael

Moderator: Vicki Vanderheyden

March 12, 2010

Vicki: Dear Father, we ask that you connect us in an energetic web that illuminates and protects us for this work we do on your behalf. May these sessions provide an avenue for all who read these words, toward truth, beauty and goodness, where truth is restored, beauty surrounds us and goodness penetrates our very being in ways that allow us to serve others with love and care. We humbly extend our gratitude to all those seen and unseen, who facilitate this process. Amen.

Celestial perceptions of mortals

Vicki: Good morning, Monjoronson. I've taken some of your advice for children, and prepared my own little quiet place to meditate and do our co-creative work. It's a cozy little room, where I can sit at a desk or in a comfortable chair, surrounded by books and photographs and memorabilia, and it is where I am now. Can you see me?

MONJORONSON: Oh, very clearly.

Vicki: May I ask another question along that curious line? (Of course.) Could you explain the access that you may have to our thoughts, our actions, our conversations?

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

MONJORONSON: Yes, very easily. I would like to draw a metaphor for you: Imagine yourselves in a room, and that you are hearing the children in the next room playing cards and games of that sort, and you are busy about your own work and you have closed the door between you, and now you are occupying your time, doing what you do, but you can still hear the children in the background. When you wish, you can stop what you are doing and listen closely and you will have full awareness of what the children are talking about. And so, my situation and the angels, celestial teachers and so on, are very similar in that regard, that we have access to your mind—they are energetic vibrations. Remember, thoughts are “things,” they actually exist much as the pencil or pen on your table or desk. They exist, they are permanent and they have existence. Your thoughts are very easily registered in my awareness; I understand what you are thinking, and I understand the dialog that is going on between you and other people. So too, I am able to disregard the mind chatter that is not relevant to the topic at hand, or to the subject we are working with. I can have a conscious filter, so to speak, such as you have when you are listening to children. If you should hear something in your peripheral hearing of concern, you would stop what you are doing and listen closely. It is very similar for us; we have an awareness, a conscious awareness, we are tuned in to you, and so when there are peak words, or significant words or topics that come up, then we listen in. Does this help you:

Vicki: Oh, yes! What a beautiful metaphor. I think that is very descriptive, and one I can relate to. Thank you. (You are welcome.)

The topic of gender

I'm going to move on to our topic for this session, unless you have something else you would like to share. (No, let us proceed.) Okay. Your discussion on how we mortals are handicapped on our planet is one that I have reflected on, and from that contemplation, a topic surfaced, and the topic was “gender.” So today, I am going to ask questions around the theme of gender.

I'll begin with my first question: In universal or spiritual terms, how would you define the difference between the feminine and masculine gender? For instance, why do we refer to you in the masculine gender, as a Magisterial Son, instead of a Magisterial Daughter?

MONJORONSON: (With a chuckle.) You really have two questions there. The first, I would be glad to answer, is that we observe gender both as a biologic material function, which is... (a brief interruption for Daniel).

[Vicki: Do you want me to help you get back to the question?

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Daniel: No, just let me drop back in. It is kinda like a phonograph needle that has been jogged and races across the grooves, and so I drop the needle back in the groove.] (Short pause.)

Gender as a predisposition or temperament

MONJORONSON: We see gender first as a predisposition, or a temperament, an orientation towards yourself, among other people. What is the most highly registrable and significant part of understanding you, of understanding others, is that there is a mindset according to gender on your world. This was designed-in by the Life Carriers, and it was approved by those higher in authority. This is a permanent predisposition of individuals, of male and female orientation. This is recorded in your genetic code, and of course, as you know, not everyone is a true type male or a true type female, that there are mixes and different proportions of these predisposed gender temperaments in each individual. Some men experience a very balanced gender temperament and predisposition between the masculine and feminine in themselves, and others are more feminine, and others are more male. The same proposition for women.

We are not so much concerned about your biologic function in our discussions with you, as this is not something in our awareness; it is simply a lesser issue that gains our attention. We are much more concerned how you feel relevant to your society, how you feel relevant to yourself as one of the genders. It is important to understand your gender temperament and orientation, and that you are comfortable with it. This has a great deal to do with your self-esteem, your self-image and your social-image, all of which affect the budding spirituality that grows within you.

Male orientation of Descending Sons of God

Now, to your second question: You are aware that the Descending Sons of God, including the Divine Son, all have male orientations. Why is this, you were asking? It is simply a way of designating maleness for this characteristic of executive capacity, to be able to “take charge,” as you would say, to use your language. This phrase does not explain very well, the temperament of the Son Order. It could have just as easily been called the Daughter orientation for executive capacity. However, on your world this capacity is male oriented in the vast majority. Yes, there are matriarchal societies with feminine dominant executive capacity individuals and lineages. However, this is in the main a very miniscule percentage of your global population and cultural orientation.

We provided this orientation for the Descending Sons, as explained to you, simply for your ease of understanding. Yes, you do have those women who have been deprived of executive capacity—we call that equality—which has been missing in the vast majority of all human history on Urantia, and which is missing so much in some cultures, both due to ethnic reasons and due to religious reasons and cultural heritage.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Remember that gender equality is a signicator for maturity of a society and civilization. This goes hand in hand with the elevation of sustainable peace in the world. Thank you.

Vicki: We've been told that our gender identity will continue throughout our ascendant career. In other words, as we ascend, will there be less expression of our gender, and possibly more of a blending of gender differences?

Does gender orientation continue during ascendant career?

MONJORONSON: Yes, most certainly. Your gender orientation will be strongest at the earliest eras of your morontial existence, and by the time you reach Paradise, after traversing through the Havona spheres, you will be virtually genderless; it will be much like your favorite color would be pink, and that would be all the significance that you may give to your gender at that time, is that something you have a personal preference for—it doesn't affect your thinking, or your own executive capacity, or your compassion for others. It becomes less and less as you ascend.

Vicki: That's what I thought. And it speaks to the gender handicaps that we feel, that we impose upon each other on our planet, because it seems like it does interfere with our growth, whether it is the female gender imposing on male, or male imposing it on female. Would you say that is an accurate assumption?

Mortal gender handicaps

MONJORONSON: Most certainly. You have many handicaps in being a mortal, one of which is your gender, and those who have conflicts with their gender, perhaps may find it easier to accept their education in the afterlife.

Vicki: I thought we could get more specific in terms of defining those, Monjoronsen, if you welcome this idea. So my next question is: What do you consider to be the major handicaps—the major ones for the female gender, at this time on our planet?

MONJORONSON: For this time, on this planet? (Vicki: Yes, taking into account that they vary from one culture to another, but it seems like there may be some that are more general than others.) In your mortal lifetime? (Yes.)

It is very much the same of males. Very few of you have the capacity to wipe away your gender—the gender factor—when you think of humanity, whether male or female. If you were able to do that, you would begin to see people as individuals, unique unto themselves, without gender. The major issue both for males and females is self-image and self-worth. Many of you do not feel that you are worthy of the goodness that comes into your life, simply because you have not been trained or given the predisposition of self-worth, as an individual. Males have a tremendous difficulty with this as well, particularly in those cultures which are strongly masculinely oriented, simply because they have an over-inflated self-worth, which is dependent upon their gender—that is a false reading of their worthiness in the long run.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

As you perhaps may begin to understand or see, gender becomes less and less an issue as you move forward in your spiritual career. We are striving to assist the advancement in this kind of thinking—the morontial thinking of gender—in those who write and teach about equality in terms of gender. A much more powerful medium of expression would be to see each person as an individual, without their gender specified. I know I have gone far past the parameters of your question, but we are striving for you to see it from our perspective, which is in terms of your ascendant career, 98% of your career. Thank you.

Vicki: I appreciate that extended view; it is exactly what we are looking for here, is that kind of direction. So thank you.

We are learning that even in modern times, there are many myths related to gender that influence our society, some of which we may have touched on here. What do you consider the most detrimental myth that we could and should work to correct at this time?

The myths of gender influence

MONJORONSON: The largest myth is that males are leaders, whether you look into the written myths of ancient cultures, or the myths that are perpetuated in contemporary cultures, the myth of men as leaders is foremost and dominant. Men assume their leadership, due to the human consciousness that pervades your world. Ten thousand years does not give you much historic separation from your Neanderthal ancestors, those individuals who were so similar to you. You have much of this ingrained in your being. The great myth of masculine leadership stems from brute force and overpowering those who are physically weaker and weigh less, and do not have the muscular development.

Women, on the other hand, have a much more highly developed sense of themselves as social beings, because they have had to learn how to manipulate the home, clan, and tribe social environments to have their views and their wishes become known and affect the course of their tribes, families and clans. True leadership in your world will not occur until the dyad of male and female as competent and capably co-responsible, co-leaders of a family, or of a business unit exists. You have wasted so much of your intellectual and cultural capacity in the male and female psyche, which can be used constructively in the efforts both socially and through your business cultures and governmental cultures, than you have any idea. These do not come out, and do not become known until compatible male-female co-responsible partners work together over a period of time. There comes a synchronicity in their work that surpasses what is obvious to you. Thank you.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Vicki: Thank you. These gender handicaps that we have on our planet, seem to have roots in our childhood, as well as in our evolutionary progress. Our childhood has a tremendous impact on our future relationships. How we are guided by parents seems to affect our comfort and freedom to express our gender, or to advance beyond our gender. So my two questions are: What is your advice to parents when raising a child of the male gender? And then, what would be your advice to parents when raising a child of the female gender?

Raising children to be equal, to be whole

MONJORONSON: I would prefer to answer both questions simultaneously. The best course of action in raising children, both male and female, is to treat them equally. Do not project stereotypes for their gender, upon their careers or how they relate to one another socially, or to their role within the family structure. It is essential for the well being of males and females to have this type of training given to them. As I said, many men have an over-embellished, superiority complex, and many women have an inferiority complex—both express the inadequate and incomplete formation of a mature, social being. Children are not given a chance to become whole and complete social beings if they are programmed by their parents to occupy the role of only one gender. The business of growing in a social environment, yes, does involve gender, but it is over dramatized, it is over emphasized and given too much significance to the future of the child. This is a handicap, both for males and females. When you give them this predisposition, they later on have to overcome it in order to become capable leaders and participants, members of a larger community. You will find in some small communities in your world, some that have existed for many generations, that children are not given gender related roles early in life, but only assume these later as they become procreatively capable, and must then take the role of mother and father within a procreative family.

I make these statements this specific as not to give you the impression that we are gender specific or gender related in the work that we do with you. You should note, and will note with careful observation, that we treat you equally, we hold you to be of equal value and we appreciate you as you are. We do value each of you in your maleness and femaleness as you express an equitable view towards your children. This is a responsible position to take and we encourage you to see yourself as equals with peers of your own age and social group, as we also ask you to teach your children the same. Thank you.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Vicki: Yes, I understand, Monjoranson, and I feel that what you are trying to convey to us, is that we spend way too much time, in the business of gender stereotyping, and the separating, rather than the unifying qualities of our personalities, am I correct? (Exactly so.) That was one of my concerns, as I was compiling these questions, was that too much discussion about one gender or another, leads to stereotyping, so I really appreciate that you are pointing that out to us. And it is especially comforting, I'm sure, for a lot of us, that we are viewed more in a holistic way.

Gender stereotyping causes separation

MONJORANSON: This is a lesson in discernment, in a larger scale, that you have said it yourself that gender stereotyping causes separation from others, that boys cannot associate with girls, and girls cannot associate with boys, that girls must do their prepping and priming and acting pretty and having peculiar gender related activities and gestures, to be fully feminine. This is an over embellishment of so many archaic traditions. You, as a discerning individual, can raise your children very equitably, even morontially in terms of gender, were you to engage your powers of discernment in the childrearing process. By discerning carefully, you will avoid stereotyping boys and girls with stereotypical statements, and projections and models. Thank you.

Vicki: Thank you. I am thinking about all of this. You've certainly given us the goals to reach for, however, in our society, we are still caught in this handicap. For instance: As a teacher, I often saw the inability for little boys to express themselves emotionally, and so even though my goal, like you have stated, should be not to view this child in terms of gender, what I was seeing were the results of a gender handicap. Can you speak to that?

MONJORANSON: Yes, certainly. As a teacher, who sees children come and go over the years, and get to know them quite well, even personally during the duration of a school year, you have seen the handicaps of gender stereotyping. It is difficult for you to engage that as a teacher, in the brief time that you have the attention of the child, one of a whole room full of children. It is almost impossible for you to correct those behaviors, or to right the wrongs and injuries that you see so evident in the faces and hearts of the children. You can have a powerful influence, however, to engage the thoughtfulness of children as intellectual and reflective individuals, to teach them what I am sharing with you today, and let these words of wisdom settle into the minds of these small ones.

Parents and adults often forget that these children are living, thinking individuals, who ingest the words that you give them, and oftentimes—and sometimes—retain these wisdoms, these reflections of wisdom and experience, in their minds for the duration of their lives, mulling them over and trying to justify and rectify the difference of opinion of how they were raised, and what the teacher said, and how they live out their own choosing as an adult. Were you to wipe away the gender of this child, you would see a child who has had difficulty expressing his feelings. Yes, you see this child as a boy, as a male, yet how many times do you see women as adults, who have muted emotional capacity, to express their true feeling, what is in their heart, and share that easily and confidently, without first becoming angry or intoxicated through their passions, to express their feelings?

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

We see equal injustice and damage to boys and girls, as we view adults as emotionally expressive individuals. Remember, dear ones, that your emotional maturity is the flipside of the coin of your whole being; the other side being your spiritual development. You will find few masters of spiritual evolution who have not evolved emotionally as well. Thank you.

Vicki: That's an interesting comment. Yes, and I do see both sides. Okay. I'm ready to move on here.

This is a question that is hard for me to understand: There is a reference in the Urantia Book, that says that in nature, sexual equality does not prevail, and that only as we socially evolve, do—for instance—women begin to establish more of an equal status. Can you explain this for us?

Sexual inequality in nature

MONJORONSON: Most definitely. You will see in the insect world that there is a huge difference between the males and females, and their power in their insect world, in their species. You see with bees that drones do not collect honey, do not collect pollen, which are only there to mate with the queen, and have little function otherwise. The queen reproduces. You will see in a pasture of cows, where the bulls are dominant and they vie for power among themselves to mate with females. There is a very definite separation of the genders, as far as their power and participation in their group. This tremendous separation is seen in many of the species. Yet, you will see in some of the more evolved primates, an equal capacity to care for the young infants. However, you will see among bears the proclivity of dominant males to kill offspring, and so the female must protect the young. You are correct in assuming and knowing, understanding, that as you evolve socially, that gender becomes less and less specific or necessary to the species. What we see as retrogressive among your species, just simply because you are the dominant species on the world, does not mean that you are as socially evolved as some of your primate cousins. You have much to learn about social equality. Your need to demand social differences due to your gender differences is antiquarian. Thank you.

Vicki: I am just going to look through my notes here, and see if I have any more questions...

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

I'm going to try for one more here: When we were talking about the myths of gender, Monjoranson, another myth came to my mind, and that has to do with the effects of our hormones. For instance, in my reading—and this has been about little boys, so that's why you are getting "male" references here—we are finding one of the hormones that's been overly construed is testosterone, and it's referenced as being the major cause of male aggression and violence. I think that we all understand that environment plays an important role here, so I guess what I'm asking is, could you discuss the degree in which gender specific hormones plays in determining behavior?

Understanding the roles of environment and hormones on behavior

MONJORONSON: Most certainly. When you view the social activities of children before pubescence and before pre-pubescence, you will see a tremendous equity between these children. You will see very specifically, what they have learned from the roles of their parents, which are gender specific in many, many ways. When hormones begin to assert themselves in the growing bodies of these children, the hormones bring out the dominating gender factors of each child, as they are male or female. The hormones are simply enhancers of the gender development. Physically, the gonads develop and the body develops to the point of capacity of reproduction, but the behavior of the individual is affected by those hormones. Young boys will become more manlike and the more dominating or influence the hormones have in him, he will express more and more of the dominant, domineering characteristics of a powerful male. This is the aspect of hormones both for males and for females.

In the worst cases, there is the urge to mate frequently, which far exceeds any rational reason for that behavior. There are those who have lesser levels of their gender influencing hormones to the point where they feel incapable or uninterested in sexual activity. In all cases, do not forget that behavior is backed by thoughts and decisions, made from choices of behavior in the mind of the individual. Yes, you have seen very highly developed masculine men, and the same for women, who are yet socially responsible with their sexuality and the expressions of their gender. We are saying that, yes, testosterone and estrogens are very powerful in the individual, but in the end, it is the individual who makes the decision of how they express themselves within the parameters of their sexual behavior, of the sex of their gender.

Only in the most extreme cases, or perhaps 1:10,000, those who are almost insanely, overly developed in their sexuality and the need for dominance. In males, you see this as abusive, violent behavior. In women you see this as exceptionally exaggerated manipulation and sexual encouragement for dominance and control. These are all extreme behaviors, which are always ameliorated by right thinking. Therefore, it is essential that in the childhood of the individual, part of their education is more or less, ethical and social, so that they understand consciously the acceptable means of their expression in their social lives, both for their individual happiness, and the social equanimity of their group. Thank you.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Vicki: I think that really clarifies this misconception. I appreciate that. Before we conclude this session, I'm going to move away from our discussion about gender to address a concern that was brought to our attention. In our communication with friends in Chile, they spoke of the pervasive fear that many are feeling toward the continual earthquake activity that they're living with. In this communication, they specifically mentioned their appreciation for your spiritual presence, as they read these transcripts, and so I'm wondering, could you offer them some advice, and possibly some things to meditate upon?

Words of comfort for those in Chile

MONJORONSON: Most certainly. The peace that pervades all understanding, and surpasses all understanding begins in a personal relationship with the God presence within you. Your Creator, Christ Michael, as Jesus, provided that to those who knew him during his mortal reign and time here on earth. He provided them with a great assurance that even though the earth should shake and the mountains explode, there is a sureness and peace that pervades the universe, and that is in the relationship the individual has within themselves, that divine spark of God with them, who is always present with them and who wishes only that the relationship between that individual and God the Divine, grow into more and more, firmer and stouter assurance of its eternal existence. People have survived many cataclysms, both personal and immediate, and those which are distant and far away and begin within the bowels of the earth, through their relationship with God. I am here with you; I am God's Son from Paradise, to be here with you. I have chosen to be here with you to give you greater security in your life while you are here in mortal flesh, and to assure you of a tremendously exciting adventure of ascension in your afterlife.

There is a life for you here and you are needed, you have a purpose and a reason for being here, and that is to grow in greater assurance that you have something special to do in this world and in the afterlife. Yes, we of my team and the liaison team do wish that you each would know that our presence here is powerful, we are present—though you cannot see us—and we have a course of life, an education and training for you, which will make you hopefully feel more secure in your life. You see earthquakes and the destruction around you as survivable, that you are not destroyed, as your house, your home and your property is destroyed, but that you exist. And even those loved ones who were killed and crushed in this cataclysm, now rest in the arms of Christ Michael's mansion worlds, where they are at peace and loved by all around them. Yes, dear ones, we are here to help you change your world, both on the outer and the inner, for yourselves. Thank you.

Weekly Transcripts # 12, 2010

Vicki: That was very nice, Monjoronsen, thank you for that. I'm sure they will truly appreciate it. Unless you have something to add, this concludes our session with our highest gratitude for your words of wisdom.

MONJORONSON: All is well.
